DAY 5 WORKSHEET — OFFER, PRICING & PITCH

Graduation night. The skill makes you capable — the positioning makes you chosen. Package what you built, price it on ROI, and send one pitch within 48 hours.

NAME: _____ DATE: _____

01 REWRITE YOUR POSITIONING

From job title to outcome. Specific gets hired; general gets scrolled past.

Old headline (what your profile says today):

New positioning line — "I help [who] get [result] using AI and automation":

Your proof — which of this week's builds gets pinned to your profile?

02 NAME YOUR OFFER

Pick ONE build from the week (prompt system, automation, agent) and package it. You're not inventing — you're naming what you already made.

1 · Name — "The _____ System":

2 · Who it's for:

3 · The outcome it delivers:

4 · What's included:

5 · The price:

03 PRICE IT WITH THE ROI FRAME

Hours per week this saves the client:

What that time is worth to them (per month):

Your price, anchored to that value — write the number. Then practice saying it out loud, followed by silence:

04 DRAFT THE PITCH

Problem → Proof → Offer → CTA. Aim it at a real person.

PROBLEM — the pain you lead with:

PROOF — the build you'll show ("happy to demo it live"):

OFFER — one clear package:

CTA — one clear ask:

05 THE 48-HOUR COMMITMENT

WHO receives this pitch (a real name — warm contacts first):

WHEN you'll send it (within 48 hours — date and time):

- [ ] My positioning line names one WHO and one RESULT.
- [ ] My offer has all five parts, including a price I didn't apologize for.
- [ ] My pitch leads with the client's problem, not my biography.
- [ ] I committed to the send — publicly, in the crew.

COACH'S NOTE — Five days ago some of you were nervous to open Claude. Tonight you have a skill, a portfolio, an offer, and a pitch. Go get sh*t done.
